$10,000,000 Trans-Canada Airway Next Year

Dominion Day Will See Inauguration of Air Service in Keeping With March of Time

A further development of recent months is increased government interest and activity both in commercial and military aviation. After some years of seeming indifference, during which we lagged behind most of the world, we are now taking to the air in a reasonably big way. On Dominion Day next, the $10,000,000 trans-Canada airway, with a 16-hour daily flying service between Montreal and Vancouver will be put into operation, this being Canada's contribution to a great All-Red British air service practically around the world. The trans-Canada airways will have all ground and radio facilities provided by the government, but will be operated by a private corporation, though it is probable that the government will be represented on the corporation's board, with the service operated as a semi-public utility. Hand in hand with this trans-Canada service will go greater activity in military aviation. With the country's air defences on the Pacific and the Atlantic placed on a more solid basis. For the two developments, military and commercial, we shall spend some thing like $25,000,000.

Interesting Contest Sponsored by Girl Guides

Attention is directed to the display advertisement of Robin Hood Mills, whose baking contest is creating wide interest in the Pass towns. As the Guides receive a direct benefit of 5c on every entry in the contest, their friends can help by entering, besides which they have a chance of winning a cash prize. Read the announcement carefully, the rules are easy, and you'll get a lot of interest out of it. Though the main objective is to advertise the splendid qualities of Robin Hood flour, it also serves to create friendly rivalry to find who can bake the best bread or cake among the ladies.

Scoring is made on external appearance, internal appearance, and flavor in both bread and cake classes, with a possible of 100 points in each class. This contest will arouse widespread interest among the ladies of the district.

Forest Fires Cause Alarm

New Outbreak South of Blairmore on Wednesday Gives Anxious Time to Rangers

Forest fire broke out on Wednesday evening about five miles south of Blairmore from unexplained cause, and fanned by a wind of cyclonic force which has raged for several days, it quickly spread and during the night flames could be seen leaping skywards and dense clouds of smoke were driven eastward. Forest Ranger Boulton is on the scene with other rangers of the district, and it is expected a large force of men will be required to stem its advance if the wind continues.

A fire is also reported in Cougar Valley north of Blairmore. The forest is very dry and vast damage will result under present weather conditions.

Curlers Should Organize

Mild weather evidently dampens curlers' enthusiasm, though they are "rarin' to go" when the first real cold snap comes. The secretary sent out notices to about a hundred curlers last week for a meeting on Sunday. Four turned up. This week he is calling another meeting for Sunday at 3 p.m. It may be a cold afternoon, and if so then likely there will be a large attendance. Walter Purvis was president during last season. Andy Oliva is vice-president, and is full of enthusiasm for the coming season. He will naturally succeed to the presidency. Alex. Balloch of The Journal office is the secretary.

Requires Wisdom of Solomon

In Magistrate Gresham's court on Wednesday morning a difficult case was heard involving marital relationships. A Polish woman is alleged to have left her husband last December, and an agreement was made whereby the husband was to contribute towards the support of the children, two of whom were born in Poland, and one here. The woman it is reported lived for a time with another man. Subsequently she wanted her husband to take her back, but he refused. She then brought an action for non-support, and it was this tangled knot that the magistrate was called on to unravel.

S. G. Bannan appeared for the woman, and R. F. Barnes for the husband. The magistrate's decision was reserved till Saturday.

Hughes Elected Commissioner in Calgary Municipal Election

The Calgary civic election on Wednesday brought out the heaviest vote on record, and though the Social Credit candidate for city commissioner received the majority of first choices, the votes of ex-commissioner Riley, Labor candidate, who was third in the count, on being proportioned to Hughes and Traves, gave the C.G.T.A. candidate the majority, and he was declared elected. The election of two C.G.T.A. candidates, Cunningham and Freeze, conceded, with Courlay, Social Credit, third. Riley and Hughes between them polled nearly 21,000 votes, while Traves, Social Credit, polled nearly 13,000.

Widespread interest throughout the province was shown in the election, owing to the provincial government having thrown its influence into the municipal field to elect Traves and other Social Credit candidates.

Tsk, Tsk!

Although it was Wiggins' first reception, his butting was perfect. "Stand erect and announce the name of every person who comes to the door during the afternoon," Mrs. Van Ritzer had instructed him.

Wiggins had been doing elegantly. All were present now but the guest of honor. He should arrive most any time.

All eyes focused on Wiggins as he paused to announce the guest of honor. A hush fell over the big reception room. This was the greatest moment of Mrs. Van Ritzer's most formal affair.

Wiggins cleared his throat and called in a firm voice: "Mister Yeagley, the Puller Brush Man!"—Wall Street Journal.

Looking Forward to Holiday Here

The Journal received an interesting letter from Mr. Robert Young, formerly of the Men's Store, of Coleman. Mr. and Mrs. Young have been living at Sugden, Alta., since leaving here several years ago, but have maintained steady contact with old friends by subscribing annually for The Journal. He states they were on their way to Coleman recently but turned back as it was too cold for a holiday. They will visit here next summer, and Mr. Young hopes to join the fishing club. He concludes "we still enjoy reading your up-to-date paper."

Court Cases at Blairmore

Before Judge McDonald on Tuesday six small debt cases were tried in which various persons of the Pass towns were defendants. Solicitors appearing before the court as counsel were R. F. Barnes, J. E. Gillis and S. G. Bannan. 13 applicants for naturalization also appeared before the court.

Mr. James Ford, town secretary, is at present in University hospital, Edmonton, and is reported to be resting comfortably. He went there on Saturday last, for special treatment. His many friends wish him a speedy return to health.

The Unemployment and Relief Problem

When a writer is able to produce unchallenged and apparently unchallengeable figures in support of a contention that governmental debts in Canada—federal, provincial and municipal—have increased in the five-year period from 1930 to 1935 to an amount closely approximating the debt created for Canadians during the Great War and ensuing demobilization period, he is revealing a situation that is not only serious but startling, and a situation that warrants his comment that unemployment is the major problem facing the people of the Dominion to-day.

For there is no gaining the fact that practically all indebtedness incurred by governmental agencies during the last five or six years is the direct result of unemployment and the necessity for providing for the relief of those who were unable to find work for themselves or, in the case of the farmers, who were unable to secure sufficient return from their labors to provide them with a living.

Yet this condition of affairs was demonstrated recently in a series of articles by the Ottawa correspondent of a Western daily newspaper—the Regina Star, when he showed that the debt of the country including its individual provinces and municipalities, together with the C.N.R., harbor commissions and allied undertakings increased by $1,790,386,001 in the five-year period from 1930 to 1935 in comparison with an increase of $1,912,222,018 in the national debt during the five actual combatant years of the war and the subsequent year of demobilization.

While this is a heavy load to carry it might not be so had if the problem were solved and the expenditure and piling up of indebtedness on account of unemployment and relief were a thing of the past, but unfortunately this is not the case. In some parts of the Dominion, despite some improvement in economic conditions, there are still large numbers of unemployed and relief expenditures are still being made on large scale, which means, of course, that the burden of debt on this account is still accumulating.

Not only has the problem not yet been solved but the same writer, in another article of the series, quotes Dominion Bureau of Statistics data to show that while economically the country is half way on the road to recovery expenditures for relief, direct and indirect, have only declined 11 per cent. below the peak of the depression.

These facts and figures demonstrate quite clearly that efforts to solve the problem by all or any governmental units to date have had very little effect and that something more must yet be done if reduction in relief expenditure is to keep pace with the gradual return to normal employment conditions.

One of the measures which might well be adopted in an effort to minimize to some extent the burden which is piling up against present and future generations of taxpayers is a thorough investigation to determine the extent to which relief recipients have been and are abusing direct relief, and by weeding out all those who are racketeering by refusing to take advantage of opportunity to work when they have a chance to do so for reasonable remuneration or who deliberately misrepresent earnings or in any other manner secure public assistance to which they are not entitled, wholly or in part.

This should be done, not only in the interests of those who are self-supporting and are called upon to assist in supporting others but in the interests of the unemployed and relief recipients themselves, for the minority who are evading their responsibilities are a millstone around the necks of the great majority of deserving relief recipients.

Sufficient evidence appears in the press from time to time in all parts of the country to support the statement that a percentage of relief recipients are guilty of abuse and refuse to play cricket. For example it was recently reported that Hon. Mr. Croft sent investigators into a small municipality in Ontario to find that 22 relief recipients were driving their own automobiles. In other parts of the country appear reports of physically-able men refusing to work and of abuses in other forms.

Said the Toronto Mail and Empire recently: "The public authorities must increase their efforts to comb out the won't-works from the ranks of those on relief, though those who cannot yet find work must continue to be furnished with food, clothing and shelter until they become self-supporting."

The weeding out of the undeserving, however, will not wholly solve the problem by any means. There are still far too many unemployed, in fact the great majority on relief, who are willing and anxious to work if they could only get it. The only permanent and effective cure for the unemployment problem is the absorption of all who are able to work by industry. If the few federal unemployment commission can achieve this they will earn the gratitude of the entire nation and not only of the self-supporting taxpayers but the majority of those who are still unfortunate enough to need state aid.

How Romans Used Cinnamon

One Way Was Burning It As Incense To Gods

The Romans used cinnamon in ointments and balms, as well as in their cooking. It was so burned as incense and when a god was to be appeased or the shade of a departed spirit honored, cinnamon was added to the ceremonial fires. The biggest cinnamon fire ever recorded was built by Nero as part of the funeral rites for his wife, Poppaea. It is his glowing white whisks in said he burned more than one entire year's importation on that occasion.

The British army had only 397 desertions during 1933, as compared with 565 in 1924.

Kato stuffs the end of his beard in his mouth. He is also especially made handbag to keep them from dragging on the ground.

Using Ultraviolet Rays

New Electrical Device Is Aid To Butcher And Baker

That ultraviolet rays kill small organisms like bacteria and algae is one of those things which was discovered in the laboratory as a fact of pure science and is now being adapted to practical applications. An article in the Electric Journal, abstracted in the Journal of the Franklin Institute, showed that ultraviolet "bacteria guns" are finding their way into industry.

These publications had kind words to say of the "Sterilamp," a Westinghouse product. A series of long, narrow tubes shedding their garish blue light on meat in a butcher's showcase foils bacterial attack so successfully that only moderate refrigeration is necessary. Meat packers who "tender" their meats by hanging or aging, allowing enzymes to break down the tough fibres) now find it safe to speed up the tendering process by using warmer temperatures under violet-ray protection. Bakers who irradiate bread and cake before wrapping, to kill mold spores, increase the salable life of the product by several days.

Newspapers Kept Going

Depression Hit Them Hard But Standard Well Maintained

It is no secret among newspapermen that the depression has hit the newspapers hard. Services were maintained at the same standard while revenues were falling and, too, often reserves built up during prosperous years had to be seriously depleted to meet expenditures. Probably in no other business were wages interfered with as little. In many instances, too, it has been investments outside the newspaper business which have helped to keep newspapers going.

There is to-day among newspapermen, however, as there is among other business men, a feeling of optimism. Canada is once again on the upgrade, and during the last 12 months there undoubtedly will be a decided improvement in business. This will be reflected in many directions, and the hope will be that it will result in a decided increase in employment.—Kingsford Whig-Standard.

Germany Warns Merchants

Must Not Raise Prices If Food Supplies Are Short

What is described as a "last warning" to German shopkeepers to not allow the prices of foodstuffs to rise was issued recently by the German police president, Herr Hollender. The measures are to stop prices rising during a "temporary shortage" of supplies.

The police president's announcement says:

"I have closed down for good a shop at 45 Friedrichstrasse, where attempts to Philip Greiff, who has been repeatedly fined for charging excessive prices, and have had him taken into protective custody."

"Anyone who thinks that he can take advantage of the shortage of supplies by unjust price speculation shows himself to be an enemy of the community, and will be treated as such."

The governor of Baden has issued a similar warning in his district.

Has Lion As Bodyguard

Animal Accompanies Swami Even On His Social Visits

When the Swami Krishnanandji, of Jogheshwar, near Bombay, went to pay his respects to the new Viceroy at Simla he took his lion with him. A stream of children, messengers, and native servants followed the Swami's rickshaw, where he sat with his pet on one side and a dog on the other. The man and beast were well received, especially by Lord Linlithgow's family, and the party were shown all the sights. The Swami, a philosopher by profession, on observing this ceremony said gravely that the great people of the land might need such military protection; for a simple soul like himself a lion was enough. Whenever the Swami goes the lion is with him. In train or omnibus it sits beside him, while other passengers move to other seats.

Reminders Of Old R.N.W.M.P. Post In 1878

Three interesting relics, a desk, a flag pole, and a flag, at Wood Mountain, Sask., are reminders of the establishment of old post of R.N.W.M.P. in 1878.

The desk, grown gray with age, for it was the first one brought west by the Mounted Police in a Red River cart for the post at Wood Mountain, is now in the store of W. J. Moore in the new hamlet of Wood Mountain.

This old oak desk and filing case is much similar to the desks of today with two drawers on each side of the cubby where the feet rest. There are 20 spaces for files, and during the half century or more that it has been in use, it has held some important documents, particularly those relating to the Indian wars, Incursions of the Sioux from Montana, and horse and cattle rustling cases.

The flag pole from which flies the Union Jack at the new post, is the same one used more than 50 years ago, and is just as good as the day it was first erected. The original flag flown from the pole is also in the possession of the mounted police. It is too "tattered and torn" to be flown now, but forms a memento of those hectic days, that will always bring to mind some of the stirring times in the south country, when the mounted force was "law and order."

Another institution at Wood Mountain is the annual round-up and rodeo. For 53 years this annual event of the south has been staged without failing once to attract thousands of spectators. The great gathering every year is the part played by the Indians of the Wood Mountain reserve, some of whom attended the first rodeo held there.

"At times during the Indian border troubles there were as many as 50 men in the detachment of the mounted police at Wood Mountain. Now there are two men. The force at the old post was disbanded in 1916."

Under Any Circumstance Monocle Stays In Englishman's Eye

When an Englishman wears a monocle, he wears it. No matter how exciting the circumstances, the eye-glass stays right in his eye.

So when Major Herbert Musker had to make a forced landing in a field, he stepped from the cockpit of his private airplane with his monocle firmly fixed in its accustomed place in his eye.

They still delight to tell the story of an English aviation official who arrived in Montreal. On a windy day he started to climb down the mooring mast at the airport on the outskirts of the city. It was considered something of a feat to make the hazardous trip in a high wind, but when the English visitor reached the ground his monocle was still screwed firmly in place.— Windsor Daily Star.

Pan-Pacific Women's Association To Hold Conference

The Pan-Pacific Women's Association, by vote of member countries bordering on the Pacific ocean, will hold its triennial conference in Vancouver, July 12-24 next, it was announced. The dates are tentative. Since the 1934 Honolulu conference the association has taken for its objective, "practical ways and means of promoting peace and understanding among the women of Pacific countries."

The topics include, "Youth Movements for Peace," directed by Dame Katherine Furse, London; "Traffic in Arms," by Dame Rachel Crowley, London; "Technique For Development of Public Opinion," Emily Newell Blair, Washington; "Labor Standards and Standards for Living," Mrs. Monterey, Philadelphia; "Population Pressure," Mrs. Marie Kelsling, Honolulu, formerly of New Zealand.

Miss Mary L. Bollett, Dean of women at the University of British Columbia, is chairman of the Canadian section. The National Council of Women will hold its annual convention in Vancouver early in July and it is expected several leaders in that organization will stay over for the Pan-Pacific conference.

British Citizenship

Hon. Wesley Gordon Explains What It Means To World

During his recent visit to this part of the country, we asked the Hon. Wesley Gordon what was a good point to make in order to explain just what citizenship in the British Empire meant, what value it had, as far as the rest of the world was concerned.

"Go into one of the Balkan states," he said, "and tell them you're a Canadian, and when they look at you with surprise, amusement and distrust, produce your British passport."

The point Mr. Gordon was making was that while we of the British family of nations don't always think so much of each other or of the "old lady," the rest of the world has a great and deep respect for that alliance.—North Bay Nugget.

Blind Children In China Used By Wealthy Merchants

China was described to the board of trade club in Toronto as a land where four-five and six-year-old children were forced to work 18 hours a day in filthy small rooms lit by candle light.

The speaker, Captain R. G. Cavell, general manager of Canadian Telephone and Cable Supply Limited, and a former resident of China, told of seeing some of these children go blind at the age of 12, after which they were sold to wealthy Chinese merchants who made a profession out of purchasing human wrecks for begging purposes.

Late Sir Edgar Britten Was Called Knight Of The Atlantic

They called Sir Edgar T. Britten "the knight of the Atlantic" after he was knighted in the New Year's honors of 1934; and the sobriquet was earned. In his 49 years at sea, he commanded seventeen Cunard liners. The last of these was the Queen Mary. The "knight of the Atlantic" was first put on the bridge when the Queen Mary first put out to sea; and he was there when she made the blue ribbon crossing which confirmed her title as queen of the Atlantic.

Two hours before the Queen Mary was due to sail from Southampton, Sir Edgar suffered a stroke in his cabin. He was taken ashore where he died.

Through all the honors which came to him, this knight of the sea remained a simple sailor. When the late King George V. conferred knighthood on him, Sir Edgar said, "The honor belongs not so much to me as to the merchant marine generally." On the Queen Mary's arrival in New York after her first voyage, a ship news reporter whom he knew greeted the commodore as "Sir Edgar" and received the explosive reply: "Sir Edgar be damned! It's Britten to you."

When Sir Edgar saw the Queen Mary for the first time at Clydesbank, where she was built, he merely remarked: "That is a pretty nice ship." After her first voyage, he became less reserved in comment and conceded that the Queen Mary "saved herself as a lady." When the Cunard-White Star line officials were blandly denying any ambitions to set speed records, Sir Edgar bluntly declared: "Win the blue ribbon—that's what we built her for. And we will do it soon."

And he did.—Buffalo Courier-Express.

Matters Of Defence Will Be Placed Before Parliament

Ottawa.—Rumors of an elaborate new Canadian defence program, and of heavy orders for munitions and war materials to be placed in Canada, have been met with assurance from Prime Minister Mackenzie King that Canada's defence department will lay its plans before parliament which meets early in January. Until then, he stated, there is unlikely to be any official announcement on defence plans.

"The defence department program will go before parliament as it always has," the prime minister said, "and in the same manner we deal with agriculture or any other spending department of government. Proper expenditures will appear in the estimates in the ordinary way."

Highlight of the week was the prime minister's announcement two British destroyers completed in 1931 would be brought over to Canada this winter to replace the outdated Champlain and Vancouver, which are similar to the Saguenay and Skeena which, with the Champlain and Vancouver have made up Canada's naval complement of four destroyers.

But the prime minister indicated clearly purchase of these two boats and the proposed scrapping of the two older destroyers was not a recent decision but was the outcome of negotiations opened nearly a year ago.

Another highlight of the week was announcement by Hon. J. G. Gardiner, minister of agriculture, that he would convene, Dec. 14, a meeting of provincial agriculture department heads. He plans to reorganize the federal department on lines giving greater attention to marketing of agricultural products both at home and abroad. The meeting will aim further to obtain greater co-operation between provinces and the Dominion and the elimination of duplication of efforts.

There are now two Dominion-provincial government conferences scheduled for December. Hon. Charles Duggan, minister of finance, will have provincial treasurers here from every province Dec. 9 to see what can be done toward organizing a national finance council which will act in an advisory capacity in future loan and refunding operations.

This proposal came from the finance minister after his earlier plan of creating provincial loan councils to control the financial operations of those provinces unable to borrow independently, met with disapproval from some of the provinces, notably Alberta. Financial relations in general, taxation and other fiscal policies will also be discussed.

Atlantic Air Service

Expect Experimental Flights To Commence Next Spring

London.—Experimental flights in preparation for a north Atlantic air service will begin, it is hoped, in the spring of 1937.

Sir Philip Sassoon, under-secretary of state for air, informed the House of Commons that since the agreement announced July 30 negotiations have continued between the governments of the United Kingdom, Canada, the Irish Free State and the United States.

Active preparations for air bases, fully equipped with the necessary wireless and meteorological facilities, are in hand in the Irish Free State and Newfoundland. Regular service will follow as soon as sufficient experience is gained.

Speed Up Air Service

London.—Imperial Airways announced the flying time between London and Paris would be reduced from 2½ hours to 1½ hours when a new fleet of airliners is placed in service next spring.

Russia Acquitted Of Italian Charges Of Aiding Madrid

London.—The international non-intervention committee acquitted Russia of three Italian charges she had aided the Madrid government after a bitter denunciation of Russia by Dino Grandi, Italian ambassador to London.

The committee decided three of the allegations by Italy against Russia had not been substantiated and adjourned, to await receipt of further information from Russia regarding a fourth Italian allegation.

Proceedings in the committee, which earlier had approved a plan to send neutral observers to the principal Spanish ports to guard against an inflow of arms, were disclosed in a communique.

Grandi launched into a general denunciation of Russia after Russian representatives had denied the charges leveled against their country. The Italian ambassador declared Italy "accepted the challenge" of a Communist threat in Europe.

"Russia even here assumes its recent disguise as a democratic lamb . . . and endeavors to whitewash the red flag of the Communist revolution," Grandi stated.

Referring to the Spanish government's flight from Madrid, the Italian diplomat said:

"Thus ends, amidst fire and blood, the greatest attempt ever made by Bolshevik Russia to export their creed, through force and famine, beyond their frontiers."

"The Soviet representative has deemed it as a creed of peace but the facts deny him. It is a creed based on class hatred and civil strife. It is the creed of war."

"Stalin, chief of the Bolshevik revolution, said it was the duty of the U.S.S.R. to render every assistance within their power to the Spanish Communist revolution inasmuch as the liberation of Spain from Fascist oppression was not a private affair of the Spaniards but the common cause of Communism.

"We accept the challenge . . . Italy, in fact, is convinced that it is not only the future of Spain but the future of all civilized Europe that is at stake today."

The Italian's denunciation drew a quick retort from the Russian representative, Moiseyevitch Kagan.

"He (Grandi) throws himself into the fray with a whoop reminiscent of the redskins' battler in those tales which no doubt all of us read when we were young," Kagan said.

"If to-day we have to listen to the Italian representative piping a tune which Berlin has composed," Kagan continued, "then, though we may congratulate Berlin on 'victory,' we must console with Rome on yielding her independence of approach in international matters, on surrendering her former sane attitude to the U.S.S.R. at the clamor of Berlin."

"We had no quarrel with Italy ourselves," Kagan said, "but from the moment she betrayed herself as an aggressor, from the moment Italy embarked on war against a weak and defenceless people, that relationship obviously had to suffer."

"No amount of propaganda speeches for General Franco (leader of the Spanish insurgents) can hide the crying fact that Italy stands unmasked before the whole world as an aggressor and arch-violator of international treaties."

Liner Battles Wild Storm

Several Passengers On R.M.S. Queen Mary Were Injured

Southampton.—The fastest liner Queen Mary docked at Southampton after successfully riding out a wild Atlantic storm which brought injuries to a number of her passengers.

Frank Giffin, 73, residing near Tiverton, Devon, was shot 30 feet across one of the ship's rooms as she rolled in mountainous seas lashed up by 60-mile-an-hour winds. He was taken to a hospital here when the Queen Mary docked and died from his injuries. Other passengers suffered minor injuries.

Capt. R. V. Peel, his face drawn with fatigue after being on the bridge for almost 60 hours without interruption, said "I've never seen such a storm, lasting so long."

Describing the Queen Mary's efforts to rescue the Hamburg-American freighter Isla, which sank in the storm, Capt. Peel said: "We circled round three hours. We saw a hatch, pieces of wood, and a ship's boat floating on the water. Although we circled around three times we saw no human beings."

Urges Militia For Canada

National Defence Official Says Dominion Must Be Prepared

Ottawa.—"Canada must be prepared to take her place, whatever that place may be, if the call comes," Major-General E. C. Ashton, chief of the general staff, department of national defence, said at an Armistice dinner here.

"We have our job to do," he said. "We soldiers have nothing to do with policy. That is a matter for the Canadian government and will be settled by the government should any difficulties arise. I have no inkling of what this policy may be."

"But just as the army of Canada was made out of the non-permanent militia, trained before the war, who were ready to take in the new men and train them; just as the C.E.F. was made out of the militia, so must any effort in the future be founded on the non-permanent militia of this country."

Major-General Ashton said Great Britain was arming now but it would take a year and a half or perhaps two years to get into the desired shape.

King Plants Cross

Pays Informal Visit To Field Of Remembrance At Westminster Abbey

London.—King Edward, unofficial and unheralded, paid an informal visit to the flood-lit field of remembrance at Westminster Abbey, planting there a plain wooded cross inscribed "In memory of His Majesty King George V."

After standing bareheaded for several minutes, he trudged with other mourners in heavy rain through pools of water to examine the miniature fields of red poppies. His Majesty purchased two poppies from an ex-serviceman, placing a bundle of bills in the collection box.

Before leaving, he was recognized, first by a number of children. He was wearing a felt hat and a dark overcoat.

Warrior-poet of Italy, who on the fourteenth anniversary of the Fascist march on Rome, declared the Italian Air Force was engaged in turning the Mediterranean into "mare nostrum" (our sea).

Returns To Native England

Wandering Musician Earns Coppers

Montreal.—William Carter, wandering piper and fiddler, sailed aboard the Duchess of York to his native England, his ticket bought with coppers and silver earned during his travels across Canada.

This little bearded man, looking more than the 60 years he claims, estimates he received 10,000 coppers during the last seven years. His proud boast is he never went hungry in that time, though he travelled across his adopted land from Atlantic to Pacific coast.

An orphan, he came to Canada in 1900 and settled on a farm near Russell, Man. Carter hired out as a farm laborer and for many years, toiled on the prairies, playing a fiddle or pipe, every opportunity.

He was located on a little plot of ground near Star City, Sask., in 1929 but was burned out. Then he decided to see this Canada he had lived in so long and, taking his fiddle, started to play his way through the west.

His travels finally brought him to Timmins, Ont., where he struck it rich and made $100 in no time. He got 2,000 coppers in Kirkland Lake and Timmins.

The strange part is Carter has only enough money to reach England. Once there he intends to employ his fiddle again to gain funds enough for his passage back to Canada.

Population Of Japan

Tokio.—The population of Japan increased by slightly more than 1,000,000 persons during the year ended October 1, the statistics bureau reported. Japan proper had a population of about 70,150,000, the report said, and the census showed there were approximately 190,000 more men than women.

Seeking Trade Relations

Montreal.—Haiti seeks establishment of permanent trade relations with Canada and both the Caribbean republic and the Dominion would benefit by a reciprocal agreement, Alfred Nemours, Haitian minister plenipotentiary to Paris, said in an interview here.

Britain Will Rely On Naval Strength To Maintain Peace

London.—The British government is building up its naval strength so some day soon the British fleet, supported "by the other great naval power" (presumably the United States), will assure world peace, Sir Samuel Hoare, first lord of the admiralty, declared in a broadcast.

Carrying the debate on Britain's defence policy beyond the confines of parliament, Sir Samuel outlined the general trend of the country's naval plans.

He disposed of the argument as to whether ships or planes are the superior fighting arm by declaring the navy, instead of developing rivalry, will stress ever-increasing co-operation between the two services.

Objective efficiency will be the only standard by which the naval rearmament program will be carried out, Sir Samuel said.

"So far as the new battleships are concerned, it may interest you to know they will be very different from the old ships," he added, "and we have taken into the fullest possible account war experience and post-war experiment."

He declared expert study of the country's defence problems had resulted in the conclusion a powerful navy was the primary factor in controlling the seas.

Will Be Issued Free

Great Britain Plans To Make Gas Masks For Civilians

London.—Great Britain "very shortly" will be producing free gas masks for civilians at a rate of 2,000,000 monthly, Geoffrey Lloyd, under-secretary of the home office, told the House of Commons.

Under questions by members of parliament, Lloyd declared: "Substantial stocks of component parts of civilian respirators have already been produced, and they are expected to be on large scale assembly by March."

The masks, he said, will be issued free "in event of an emergency."

Women Taking Up Homesteads

Edmonton.—Women are pressing "western home-men" for pioneering honors in Alberta according to October homestead statistics released here by the department of lands and mines. During October 135 Edmonton residents filed for homesteads and 40 of them were women. At Peace River 79 recorded, 23 being women, and at Calgary 21 men and five women filed.

Recognize Conquest

Vienna.—Austria and Hungary, in both of which Italy exercises a strong influence, have tacitly recognized the Italian conquest of Ethiopia.

Two Destroyers To Be Purchased By Canada From Britain

Ottawa.—The Dominion government is purchasing from Great Britain two modern destroyers, built in 1931, to replace the "Champlain" and "Vancouver," which have become practically obsolete and are due for scrapping at the end of the year. Prime Minister Mackenzie King made the announcement.

The new destroyers are to be practically identical with the Saguenay and Skeena, which are a part of Canada's naval defence and which were completed in 1931. Cost and further particulars of the new craft will be announced when parliament is asked to vote the necessary appropriation.

Any further announcement with respect to defence policy, the prime minister said, would be made before parliament by Defence Minister Ian Mackenzie. Date of parliament's opening is not fixed but it is still the intention of the government to assemble as early as may be possible in January.

Following is the official statement in which purchase of the new destroyers was announced:

The destroyers Champlain and Vancouver, which were borrowed from the British government in 1928 and have since been maintained by Canada as a part of the Canadian naval service, have become practically obsolete and under treaty provisions are due for scrapping by the end of this year. "To the question of

"You will see at once that if the principles of sea power are unchanged, it means that we can still use this great influence as we have used it in the past for our security and for the security of the world at large."

He declared British naval power never menaced world peace as had the land forces of militarist powers.

"Let us plan for a time," he concluded, "when British sea power will prove itself an overwhelming force on the side of peace, and when, supported as it may be by the other great naval power, it will once again make a world war impossible."

Criticism raised against the government's rearmament program in parliamentary debate will soon be reviewed at a conference between Prime Minister Baldwin and a delegation representing the Conservative majority in the House of Commons, it was learned.

Winston Churchill, who led the attack against the alleged slowness of the defence program, will be included in the delegation.

A step in preparation to defend London against air attacks was revealed when the war office announced formation of three new batteries and seven companies for anti-aircraft defence to reinforce those already in existence.

Wins Literary Prize

Mrs. Kathleen Strange Receives Award In Canadian Book Contest

Toronto.—Mrs. Kathleen Strange, Winnipeg, wins the $1,000 award in the Canadian book contest's non-fiction division for her work "The Modern Pioneer," it was announced at the National Book fair.

The contest was sponsored jointly by George J. McLeod, Ltd., Toronto publisher, and the Dodge Publishing Company of New York, with co-operation of the Canadian Authors' Association. Two prizes of $1,000 on account of advance royalties were offered, but no award was made in the fiction division, in which the judges considered the prize not merited.

More than 170 manuscripts were received. Judges were S. Morgan-Powell of the Montreal Star, C. R. Sanderson, Toronto public library, and Dr. Pelham Edgar, president, Canadian Authors' Association.

Irish Friendship

Manchester.—Manchester plans to send "a shipload of friendship" to the Irish Free State. "A real Irish welcome awaits your delegation," cordially responded Mayor Alfred Byrne, of Dublin, hearing of the plan.

NOTES AND COMMENTS

VIEWING the dilemma in which Premier Aberhart finds himself to implement his pre-election promises of Social Credit dividends, his inability to meet maturing bond obligations and the continued suspension of Alberta Savings Certificates payments, the following extract from an article in the magazine "Canadian Business" will prove of interest:

HANDSOME is as handsome does, say business and industry, and those who have neither the opportunity nor the duty of frequent contacts with Mr. Dunning, (Federal Finance Minister), are pardonably more interested in what Mr. Dunning does, how he is meeting the daily problems of federal finance and what is his attitude towards pressing questions. Take the Easy Money regime in Alberta and the box in which Premier Aberhart finds himself, his efforts to redeem election pledges without ruining the credit of his province. Near the end of last March he made almost pathetic appeals to Ottawa to meet a debenture issue of $3,200,000 maturing on April 1st. He was even prepared to pledge subsidy payments against the advance asked of the Dominion, but he obstinately refused to accept the very logical condition which Mr. Dunning thought should be imposed on any federal advance to enable a province to meet its obligations.

IT WAS not simply Mr. Dunning's refusal to aid Alberta except on a Loan Council basis that is important. Significance attaches to the broader ground on which was based his flat rejection of the Aberhart proposal, for the Alberta Premier in one of his pleading wires to Ottawa uncorked a wild scheme to refund about one-half of the province's total outstanding debt by an issue of $67,000,000 perpetual Alberta Government stock, a non-repayable issue, a consol. Mr. Dunning, responsible for the protection of the credit of the whole country and of the several provinces, saw in this plan a threat not only to the credit of Alberta but discrimination against other public securities and an imperilling of the whole fabric of national credit. The Minister of Finance could hardly be expected to meekly submit to a game that would help Aberhart escape criticism in his own province but would at the same time jeopardize the name and credit of other provinces and of the Dominion.

MR. DUNNING, answering Premier Aberhart's first beseeching wire of March 12th, had this to say: Your letter requesting Dominion loan to assist you in meeting April 1st maturity reached me simultaneously with Premier's [Aberhart's] newspaper announcement that province was about to introduce legislation reducing interest rates on outstanding debt apparently without reference to proposed Loan Council arrangement. Announcement has already had serious adverse effect on market, particularly for Western provincial bonds, and proposal, if carried out, would nullify all efforts already made and proposed to be made by Dominion to protect credit of provinces and the Dominion as a whole. In view of action contemplated by province I do not see how I could justify to Parliament and the country the loan for which you are now asking."

A SIMILAR tone was audible in the other communications sent by the Minister of Finance. They were not just refusals; adequate reasons accompanied them. They were not peremptory, but sufficiently courteous and reasoned as to discourage any attempt by Premier Aberhart to get somebody to please martyrize him. Social Credit has been kicked about a good deal since Major Douglas first came and made his lucrative get-away. Many names have been since given to it and interim doses of other kinds of easy money have been administered to the people of Alberta, but the communications exchanged last March between Ottawa and Edmonton did a real service to the nation by clarifying the issue. This, at least, can be said: A majority of the people of Canada have not yet through their elected representatives, declared for rubber money and until they do Mr. Dunning will continue to care for the national credit on the basis of honest money, a decent regard for contracted obligations and a fair return to those who loan their money to help conduct the nation's business.

Died in Toronto

Mr. Arthur Reid, chairman of the school trustees, received a telegram on Monday night announcing the death of his father, Mr. Thomas Reid, aged 85, at the family home in Toronto, the cause being pneumonia. He originally came from Edinburgh, with his wife, settling in St. Johns, Newfoundland, where he was superintendent of the government dry dock. In 1891 the family moved to Montreal, and in 1912 they came to Lethbridge living there till 1920, when they went east to Toronto. His wife died in Lethbridge and was buried there in 1919. He was a marine engineer and served on the Allan line of steamships, well known in the early days of the big influx of European immigration.

Surviving members of the family, besides Mr. Arthur Reid, are the Misses Jessie, Alice, Julia and Nellie, of Toronto, daughters, and Mrs. John Anderson, of Montreal.

A night flight from Lethbridge by Air Commodore H. Hollick-Kenyon on Friday evening aroused wide interest as he flew over Coleman. Though flying at about 12,000 feet the roar of the motors was easily heard and the lights on the plane were distinguished by those with keen eyesight. The majority saw what they took to be a moving star. The plane was engaged on aerial radio signalling, which work was held up for two weeks through the plane being disabled here when the propeller blades were damaged at the airfield on Oct. 27.

Will the Act Function?

The people of Alberta are entitled to judge for themselves the unfairness and injustice of The Reduction and Settlement of Debts Act. This is the first of a series of short statements concerning the Act, and its effect on you.

Will the Act function? Be it just or unjust, will it work? There are cases pending in the Courts in which the question of the validity of the Act is raised. Until the decision of the Courts is rendered, it is natural that lending companies cannot be expected in the meantime to prejudice their rights. Companies have been and are still prepared, regardless of what the decision of the Courts may be, to enter upon negotiations and explore all avenues in an effort to arrive at arrangements fair to debtor and creditor, a course which was recently followed by companies doing business in the Province of Saskatchewan.

Debtors should think over their position, and the doubtful security the Act might provide, before brushing aside the undertakings they entered into when they obtained their loans. Those who are not debtors should think what their position will be in a community where promises are lightly cast aside. If you cannot trust your neighbor—if your neighbor cannot trust you—what becomes of security and the basis upon which business and all other human relationships rest?

This statement is one of a series written by The Mortgage Loans Association of the Province of Alberta. The Association is composed of 34 member companies. It represents hundreds of thousands of small investments by typical Canadians. Its loans to citizens of Alberta amount to some forty-five million dollars.

(The second statement in this series will be published in two weeks)

Cowardly Attack on Dan McNaughton Saturday Evening

Three Young Men Came Up
From Behind and Knocked Him
Down and Robbed Him.

Some time before 8 p.m. on Saturday Dan McNaughton, well known peddler of goods in the Pass towns, was assaulted in a cowardly manner in Grafton-town, near a certain residence, and robbed of an amount stated to be about $35. McNaughton informed friends that he was walking towards town, when he heard the young men coming behind, and thinking they were in a hurry, as he was loaded with two heavy suit cases, he stepped aside to let them pass. They threw something over his eyes, he stated, so that he could not identify them, and in the act of robbing him they injured his thumb.

He struggled as bravely as he could to defend himself, but was powerless with three young ruffians and didn't have a chance. Where the assault and robbery occurred is a lonely spot, and it is surmised that the assailants are young men known in the neighborhood who had been watching their opportunity to rob McNaughton. Sympathy is expressed for him, as he works hard to pay his way and being a man well on in years, the cowardly act aroused public indignation to such an extent that people feel the ruffians should be given a liberal dose of the lash.

Solid Sponsorship

The outstanding medium for institutional advertising is the weekly newspaper. A message designed to create goodwill has the greatest response in a publication which possesses the good will of its readers. Of all the reading matter going into the homes of Coleman, The Journal easily rates first in interest and confidence. The two pre-requisites for increased sales in the down market are retailer co-operation and buyer confidence. The weekly press effectively can fulfill both these essential requirements.

Salvation Army Routed The Devil

His Satanic Majesty Rushes

And Hasn't Been Seen Since.

A special offensive against sin and the Devil was waged at Coleman Corps of the Salvation Army during the past ten days. Officers, visitors, and soldiers united in doing the unusual in order to disturb the perambulations of his Satanic Majesty in the Pass. The campaign was led by Lieut. Mattison of High River. Great crowds were attracted and much good was accomplished amongst the young people of the town in leading them towards God. Special meetings for children were a feature of the campaign. The children flocked to the hall to see and hear unusual doings such as the "Burning of the Idol" and "The Prodigal Son in Rags," etc.

A great stir was created when the Devil made his appearance at the open air stand one night, fully equipped with horns, tail and hoofs. The poolroom was emptied 'like a shot' as the men poured out to see the Devil scoffing at the Salvationists. However the Devil was soon put to rout, captured, tied with ropes and dragged to the hall, which was packed to the doors. The program commenced with the Devil putting in his appearance on the platform to the accompaniment of weird music and flashing lights. The Salvationists then presented a spectacular program entitled "The Devil's Tool Chest," which culminated with the Devil rushing from the hall shouting "Foiled!"

During the campaign valuable assistance was given by Capt. Frewing, Lieut. Clarke, and members of the Army from Fernie, B.C.

Lantern slides were enjoyed by the children, especially the children at Crows Nest, B.C.

The grand finale was reached with a Training College Night, when Lieut. Mattison described adventures in the Salvation Army College in Toronto.

Kimberley Dynamiters passed through on train 12, Wednesday, on their way to Europe for a series of games.

Mining Capital Centres Interest in Athabasca

Several New Companies In Process Of Formation With Powerful Backing To Develop Massive Ore Zone In Areas Near Smelters And Athona Operations

Developments are taking place in Lake Athabasca area in northern Saskatchewan that promise to bring this new field into great prominence. The Athabasca area was first placed on the map by the exploration and development of two properties located in close proximity along the north shore of Lake Athabasca by Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company of Canada and Athona Mines Limited. At the present time, however, several companies are being formed, with strong capital backing, to acquire and develop several large holdings in adjacent areas, which will serve to focus attention of mining interests generally in this field.

New discoveries have been made of massive proportions. Preliminary exploration at various points has disclosed ore zones containing high values not only in iron, copper and other precious metals, as well as copper and other base metals which will serve to focus attention of mining interests generally in this field.

Three New Enterprises As an indication of what is transpiring, Borealis Syndicate was formed some months ago. Properties in the Athabasca area. Important discoveries are reported. Units which sold at $500,000 each cannot be purchased now for $50,000.

Three discoveries are reported to have been uncovered on the various Borealis Groups two of which are reported to be gold-bearing and one a huge deposit of mineral-bearing ore, including nickel, copper, silver and gold. This enterprise is stated to be passing from the syndicate stage to be succeeded by a company in which wealthy mining interests will participate.

On a second property, the exact location of which has not been disclosed, assaying of ore has been under way for a considerable period, with such results that a company is being incorporated to acquire and develop the property. It is a gold enterprise.

A third new enterprise is Mineral Belt Locators Syndicate, four miles east of Athona Mines, and on their property enrichments in several minerals are said to have been disclosed including copper, nickel, silver and platinum, with dimensions and values that warrant formation of a company and exploration and development of a large scale.

Pioneer Developments Success is understood to have attended exploration and development underground and the two pioneer enterprises. Work at the Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company's mine has been going on intensively. Early this year forward interest was made officially that the company intended to build a 750-ton initial mill, but development has since altered the picture, it is understood, that a much larger mill is planned.

Developments have been carried forward rapidly at Athona. Two shafts have been driven to the second level and the other to the first level. Lateral work from the two shafts has exposed the major ore zones in all of which commercial ore is being developed.

Development underground in the Athabasca field so far are believed to have demonstrated that deposits were derived from an intrusive rock long after the intrusion of granite. Where gold occurs in the granites, they appear in quartz veins, indicating that they came in through fracture planes. The massive sedimentary zone reported to have been discovered on the Athona property this summer, and which is gold-bearing, suggests that fracturing of the granite and quartzite took place at the same time and that actual mineral deposition took place at a later period from an igneous mass below. Miners' deposition in these two types of rock is identical.

Latest information on the discovery in the quartzite zone on Athona shows that it is tremendously important. Channel sampling to date have shown $10 to $12 ore over widths of from 12 to 16 feet. Distinct zones. Sampling of the entire mass is not yet completed.

Crown Jewels Well Guarded

Alarm Was Recently Sounded But It Proved A Mistake

It was precisely 12:30 p.m. in the Tower of London. The usual crowd of visitors was passing through Wakefield Tower, where glimmer from velvet beds the Imperial and royal jewels of the Crown. These famous Crown jewels are expected to be held bullet-proof sheets of glass and guards are constantly on the alert. Steel doors lead to the jewel room.

Suddenly the steel doors closed of themselves. No more visitors could enter; those within were shut up with the guards. Simultaneously, there was the crash of the alarm gongs. From the corridors would come sharp words of command, the clatter of military boots, the thud of rifle butts on the pavement, the rattling of trappings and of bayonets being fixed to rifles.

But, at the end of the ten minutes, no foiled smash-and-grab raid appeared under arrest. The guard was dismissed. The visitors drifted away. It was all a mistake.

Those mistake it was nobody could discover. The Newspaper Press and the Association had obtained permission to photograph the regalia for publication when the coronation draws near. At lunch time the photographers stopped work. As the shutters which guard the jewels were closed, the alarm went off. Just like that.

Photographing the jewels was an elaborate function. The photographers and other officials presented their permits, specially issued by the Lord Chamberlain. Carefully the guards at the entrance to the Wakefield Tower checked the names against the list supplied to them. In the jewel room itself more wardens were on guard. The keeper of the Crown jewels, Major Gen. Sir George Youngblood, and the Crown Jeweller were present.

The Crown Jeweller took the St. Edward's crown and the rest of the regalia which will be used at the coronation, together with the two Imperial State crowns and the crown worn by William of Orange, from the cases.

The photographers knew exactly where the shots were to be taken, for the difficulty of working in such confined quarters had made it necessary to hold a dress rehearsal in the studio with plaster copies of the regalia. Special lighting arranged by the Office of Works was used to modify the bias of the jewels, which included the great ruby given by the Black Prince, worn by Henry V. at Agincourt and now set in one of the Imperial State crowns.

"Oh," replied the other. "I'll have tea contradiction." "The contradiction? What sort of a drink is that?"

"Well," said the Frenchman, "you put in the whisky to make it strong, the water to make it weak, the lemon to make it sour, the sugar to make it sweet. Then you say, 'Here's to you' and—you drink it yourself!"

Designing New Medals

Three Classes Are To Be Struck For Coronation

Three classes of Coronation medals are to be struck. These will include the official medal which will be designed by the Mint; a medal in silver or bronze with one side designed by the Mint and the reverse left clear for municipal coats of arms or other required designs, and medals designed by the individual medallist, says the Manchester Guardian.

Care must be taken to ensure that the portraits of the King and Queen are worthy of the occasion, and a joint committee has been formed to which specimens can be submitted for approval.

The royal commemorative medal issued for the Coronation of King Edward VII. is generally accepted as the first English Coronation medal, for few medals were struck before 1847. This medal is now one of the rarest of such tokens.

Of all Coronation medals issued none has caused more controversy than that executed nearly 100 years ago by Pistrucci, the royal medallist, for the Coronation of Queen Victoria. One medallist of the time described the medal as "unquestionably the most censurable medal in the English series." The excuse offered was that the royal medallist had only three months in which to prepare it.

Criticism of the medal was taken to the House of Commons, where a short debate took place in the evening of July 9, 1838.

Famous Sword Stolen

Two-Handed Sword Of William Wallace Taken From Museum

The famed two-handed sword of Sir William Wallace, Scottish patriot of the middle ages, was stolen from the National Wallace Museum by four masked men.

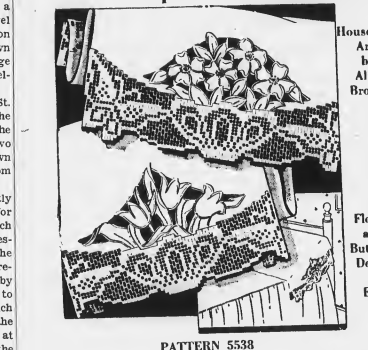

The quartet of raiders locked up the aged curator, smashed a glass pane on the fourth floor in which the weapon was displayed, and escaped.

Police said that the men told the curator they were Scottish Nationalists. The secretary of the Nationalist society denied the accusation.

The sword, five feet six inches long, was kept in Dumbarton castle from the time of Wallace's death in 1305 until 1888, when it was placed in the monumental museum.

Art critics of the South Australia's centenary stamp are writing the poems describing it as "like a jam label."

Plans Are Elaborate

Police Working To Make London Safe For Coronation

Police plans for felling the Coronation crooks are well advanced. They are more elaborate than anything of the kind hitherto attempted.

Nothing will be left to chance. Every possible emergency has been taken into account.

Fortunately, there are no fears as to any probable trouble involving injury to life or limb. It is the crook who would like to take advantage of the presence of great crowds and riches to practice his nefarious arts that the authorities have in mind.

The confidence trickster, the pick-pocket, and the burglar—particularly the "cat" variety—and the light-fingered gent generally, are the persons against whom the precautions are being taken.

The Special Branch of the "Yard"—working in conjunction with the Secret Service men—are in intimate touch with the police of Continental countries, and are having their full co-operation in making London safe for the tens of thousands of visitors who will be there for the coronation.

During the last six months a round-up of foreigners has been going on. As a result, it is expected that long before May next there will not be a single alien in the country whose whereabouts are unknown to the police.

In this comb-out, those whose presence is undesirable, or whose premises have expired, will be quietly deported.

Explanations And Comments

The Imprisonment at Rome, Acts 28:16. On reaching Rome, Paul was allowed to live by himself, in his own hired dwelling. Verse 30, but he was in charge of a soldier to whom he was chained. Soldiers relieved one another on this duty, and thus Paul became known throughout the Praetorian Guard, Phil. 1:12, 13. He never described himself as a prisoner of Rome, but always as a prisoner of Jesus Christ.

There were three kinds of custody recognized by Roman law: the severest was confinement in the public dungeons, where the prisoner was kept in chains, as were Paul and Silas at Philippi; free custody, where the accused, a Roman of high rank, was in the charge of a magistrate or senator who was made responsible for the presence of the accused on the day of trial; and military custody, when the prisoner's right hand was chained to a soldier's left. At Rome Paul was in the last category, but instead of being obliged to live in the barracks, was permitted to have his own hired dwelling. This species of custody was the least severe, but it was the good report sent by Festus and the gratitude of Julius.

Addressing the Leading Jews of Rome, Acts 28:17-22. Paul gave himself only a brief three days' rest before he summoned the leading Jews to meet him, and told them of his experiences, how, although he had in no way violated the customs of their fathers, he had been delivered up by the Jews of Jerusalem to Roman authorities as a prisoner. The latter had been ready to set him at liberty, but when the Jews opposed this he had been forced to appeal to Caesar.

He had sent for his listeners to justify himself: for it was because of the hope of Israel, the Messianic hope, that he had been in prison. The Jews politely replied that they had never written nor verbal report from Jerusalem to him. They wished to hear what he had to say, although they knew that this sect (speakers of the law, the Nazarenes, Acts 24:5, as they would of the sect of the Sadducees) was everywhere condemned.

Preaching to Jews and then to Gentiles in Rome, Acts 28:23-31. A special day was appointed when great numbers of Jews came to Paul's lodging to hear him, and he proclaimed to them the spiritual nature of the Kingdom of God. The common Jewish belief was in a temporal kingdom, and by recalling the law and the prophets Paul endeavored to persuade them concerning Jesus. As always, some believed and some disbelieved.

For two whole years Paul abode in his own hired house, and to all who came to hear him he proclaimed the Kingdom of God, and taught them concerning Jesus, speaking with all boldness, no one forbidding him.

When a man says he's never done anything to be ashamed of he means he's never been ashamed of anything he's done.

Thou Shalt Not Love

— A NOVEL BY —
GEORGIA GRAIG

Starr tried to smile at that, but it was a poor effort. Something caught in her throat. In the motherly way she had affected with the girl, Sapphira was running on:

"You all look so pale and tired, Miss Starr. Honest, you worry me. You're just like a shadow. And no wonder, the way you go on. Parties, parties, from mornin' till night. You don't ever get no rest. You'll kill yourself, shore's your're born!"

A wistful trace of a smile haunted Starr's lips as she murmured:

"You may be right—I do feel fed up with about—everything!"

What she could not tell Sapphira—or anybody—was that she knew it was not the life she was leading which was sapping her frail strength. It was the grim finger of her destiny. Days were flying into weeks. Soon it would be weeks into months. Such a little time left.

When she was parting she could forget the terror. Only at times like this it came back to her. And at night when she lay in bed in the dark the monotonous tick-tick-tick of her boudoir clock formed itself into an ominous rhythm which dinned madly into her brain.

"Thou—Shalt Not—Thou—Shalt—Not—"

Starr realized how little time she had for getting dressed for the evening, but when Sapphira insisted that she must lie down if only for a few minutes, she gave in, a little too tired for argument. What if she was late? Let them wait for her. Nowadays none of her parties ever appeared really to get going, anyway, until Starr Ellison arrived, and that was her right as well as her duty.

She had not intended to, but she must have slept. For somehow or other she was back in Egypt again, not at the tomb of terror but in one of those small desert towns that had intrigued her. She was seeing the streets, and the place of the sand diviner, living again days that had been full of joy and beauty.

There was the long, gaunt sand diviner when Starr and her father and her interpreter passed his shop. He looked like the tallest man on earth standing under the yellow light of the lantern in his shop from which came glimpses of beautiful things—scarlet embroideries, copper, gold. She could smell the incense that floated out from the pierced silver brazier.

They were outside on the sands—there was a thrill of fear as her eyes saw his, as if, even before he spoke, he was telling her something against which she fought—something in his appearance and manner suggested power and mystery, as though he could read the future with only the bag of sand he held. The interpreter said: "He is of the sand himself—they tell him secrets."

He was crouching on the ground, his tall figure hunched, covered with his white gandoura. His lips were moving. "He is speaking with his ancestors—the sand," the interpreter said.

Then a low murmur came from his lips before he began to talk rapidly, as though to himself, pouring his sand onto the ground, his gaunt finger working it into patterns.

breaking them out, making new ones. His head was shaking, his eyes downcast. Suddenly he looked up, to speak to her in a garbled mixture of French and Arabic, most of which she could understand:

"I bring you truth in a world of lies." The interpreter said: "He says he sees something wonderful in your soul, great joy, but before that, terrible pain. He sees the desert, men are digging, digging—there is a tone. There is—". He stopped as the rapid talk of the sand diviner rose into a wail. The interpreter laughed. "It was mistaken, he says—what he sees is joy—it must be joy."

"Then why is he taking it as hard as he is?" Starr asked. "He seems really to be suffering—look at the great drops of sweat on his forehead, the way he looks at me..."

"He says there is more—there must come death, great trouble, journeys across the wide seas where the people are like the sands of the desert, where their constant noise is like the howling of the jackals, before there shall come to you..."

The rest of it faded was blurred in the uneasy dream. Then Starr could hear her father's voice:

"Don't let it distress you my dear. These men are all alarmists. It's their business. I can tell you better of the future. Love, my dear, is the only real diviner. You will know when the time comes for you to know it. You must give love, too, to know the future. You cannot take love, nor wrest it. Nothing that we take is ever of great account to us, only what we are given freely."

The monotonous chant of the interpreter's voice was drowning:

"The dates anri on the palm trees, the flowers drop and die in the sand—all is dark and silent—"

Starr sat up on the cushioned chaise longue with a sharp cry. There was a quick wonder in her eyes at the recognition of the familiar scene of her bedroom. She had been dreaming, of course. As always—of Egypt. It came back to her in some shape continuously. Why must it always be so? And such vivid dreams!

Sapphira was concernedly watching her. "You didn't sleep long, did you? You mustn't be better than nothing. . . . You still might be pale and tired, though."

Starr sprang to her feet, rushed over to her dressing table. She cried suddenly:

"But I mustn't look tired and pale—I mustn't! Wait till I get busy with this rouge and lipstick, Sapphira. You'll be surprised!"

Deftly her fingers worked, transforming the soul-sick Starr Ellison into the vivacious "Play-Girl." Even that vivid dream was fading from her mind, save for a haunting memory, as though she could really hear her father's voice: "Love is the only diviner." Love—that she was never to know!

In a moment her lips were smiling, mocking once more.

"A lot of vivid color painted on glass. That's what I am, Sapphira. Some day a puff of wind will break the glass, then there'll be no more Starr."

The colored woman stared with bewildered eyes.

"Lucky makes, Miss Starr, how funny you do talk!"

CHAPTER X.

"Play-Girl" arrived at Tod Ranger's party at the Mayfair with Lancelotti, Jimmy Field, and Kerry Norris, Lance's boon companion and Miss Acheson. It seemed her to appear with three escorts when most girls had trouble enough finding one—and holding onto him.

She was unrelieved white, a frock that was as far from being any sly Egyptian-lily garment as it would be well to imagine. There was more of a hint of a belle of the old South. It was a demure dress with tiny ruffled sleeves and founced skirt. The effect against her dark beauty was devastating. The other women of the set into which Starr had been catapulted were used to her bizarre outfits. Some of them tried to imitate her with questionable success. Now that she had gone to other extreme, everyone else felt uncomfortably overdressed. Or rather underdressed. Some of "Play-Girl's" costumes had been like that.

It gave Starr a very special, sure-of-herself feeling.

The party was the usual thing. Because Starr had been a bit late, it was under way, and everyone was already on their way to being pretty tight, as they always were at Tod's parties. Tod, himself, was going strong, and showed it pretty plainly. He dropped his own partner like she was something that disagreed with him and swayed over to insist on his rights, as the giver of the party, to dancing at once with "Play-Girl." Of course Starr did, but she was not too intrigued either by his rough-house play or by his conversation. Tod, it appeared, in common with too many other men, had propositions to make to "Play-Girl." He did not intend to put them off any longer. He was inclined to be lachrymose when she laughed at him.

"Course I've never had any of those wonderful experiences you've had, but I could make the grade," he insisted, as he wobbled her down the ballroom floor.

"You must have had plenty of experiences of your own, Tod," Starr laughed. "You're holding out on me."

He held her off and eyed her solemnly. "Sure I have, kitten—plenty. Haven't you heard? Maybe nobody ever told you about that stretch I did for choking a pawnbroker and hiding him in the cellar under his own gold, or how I time drowned all the little children at the Sunday School picnic and raped the preacher's wife. . . . How about it, honey—going to be good to Tod? I've been waiting plenty long."

Starr said gently, as she disengaged herself from the too-close clasp of his arms:

"Let's talk about it later. You're a little tight, Tod. Mind if I don't dance with you until later?"

Starr walked calmly away, leaving her host standing, weaving a bit, but staring after her in surprise. With that same sure-of-herself feeling she sauntered directly over to Michael Fairbourne, leaning against a wall, and said:

"I forgive you for being such a bear this afternoon, Michael-Hassan. I'd rather finish out this dance with you. If you're not afraid of me, I'll saunter directly over to Michael Fairbourne, leaning against a wall, and said:

"Out of the corner of her eye she saw Stephanie Dale. Stephanie had agreed to come to this party. It was not being given in honor of "Play-Girl."

Stephanie's eyes blazed with jealous fury. Starr smiled softly. That was part of her new role that she enjoyed. She loved making other girls jealous, especially Stephanie. She had a long way to go before she was even with the haughty Stephanie, or with the ruthless Michael Fairbourne, for that matter, for what they had done to her.

Michael's dark, stern face never relaxed, but he accepted her taunt. She lifted her arms and his arms closed about her. Starr was quite unprepared for what happened next. They had not taken one step in the dance when Stephanie dashed forward. Her eyes were furious and her voice carried above the playing of the orchestra.

"Michael Fairbourne, don't you dare dance with that woman!"

Ottawa Journalist Thinks This Involves Serious Peril To Democracy

Grattan O'Leary, the well-known Ottawa journalist, delivered a speech before the Association of Canadian Advertisers which well deserved the attention it received from that important body, and which we hope will be shortly delivered to, and similarly received by, many other important audiences throughout the length and breadth of Canada. Mr. O'Leary, who has lived with Parliaments for over twenty years, is a believer in Parliaments, and a very ardent one. He thinks that Canadians, in accordance with an inferiority complex which extends to many fields of judgment, gravely undervalue the ability and sincerity of their public men. He thinks that this undervaluation involves a serious peril to democracy, and has much to do with the strong and evident tendency toward autocratic government in many parts of Canada.—Toronto Saturday Night.

Should Keep Window Open

Drivers Warned Against Accumulation Of Carbon Monoxide In Car

While it is commonly known that many motorists are suffocated by gas from motors running in closed garages, it is not generally suspected that gas accumulating in moving cars may be the cause of many hitherto unexplained traffic accidents. With the advent of cooler weather and the consequent inclination to drive with the car windows closed, attention may well be directed to this fact.

Recent tests show that most automobiles after being driven for some distance accumulate a sufficient quantity of carbon monoxide to affect seriously the mental alertness and muscular correlation of the driver. When you feel dull or drowsy while driving, stop and get a breath of fresh air. Make sure that carbon monoxide will not be the cause of an accident to the car you're driving.—Oshawa Times.

Winners Get Reward

Wilson Matthews and Clarence Sillbom of the Duff Baby Foot Club won the Saskatchewan championship at the inter-club competition in which 35 teams competed at Saskatoon recently. These two boys will represent the province of Saskatchewan in the interprovincial contest to be held at the Royal Winter Fair, Toronto, where they will be the guests of the Canadian Council on Boys' and Girls' Club work. 2177

Cold Storage Electricity

Laboratory Wonder Was Explained To Meeting In New York

Cold storage electricity, an amazing form of electrical energy which has existed up to now only in a few scientific laboratories, was suggested to a meeting of 1,000 physicists as a step toward ending the troubles and high expense of power transmission. "A mere thread of lead," said a report by Ray Jeffries and E. Q. Adams of the General Electric Company, "if maintained at a temperature near absolute zero, could carry all the electrical energy available at Niagara Falls, all the way to San Francisco, without appreciable losses."

Physicists who listened to the suggestion said the lead wire need be no thicker than a single strand of a spider's web.

At about 458 degrees below zero Fahrenheit, which is little more than one degree above absolute zero where heat ceases to exist, laboratories have discovered that several metals lose all resistance to electric current.

The electricity goes into cold storage. A current turned through a short loop of wire at 458 below zero, for an 18-100th of a second, stays in the wire as if it were water in a hose.

Electric current has been bottled for days in this way. It flowed out of the wire, without loss of any sort due to storage, when properly hooked up.

This laboratory wonder is known as super-conductivity. It has been found, Jeffries and Adams said, in lead, tin, mercury and some other metals. The extreme expense of making the low temperatures has prevented any practical applications.

The groundhog and the woodchuck are the same animal, the former name being given to the animal in the eastern states.

Little Helps For This Week

The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want. Psalm 23:1. They that seek the Lord shall not want any good thing. Psalm 34:10.

God, who the universe doth hold, Is my shepherd kind and heedful, Is my shepherd and doth keep Still supplied with all things needful.

What a wonderful thing it is to have the Lord for our shepherd. The almighty Creator of all things who holds the universe in His hands, as though it were a very little thing, has charged Himself with the care and keeping of you just as a shepherd is charged with the care and keeping of his sheep. If our hearts could only take in this thought we would never have a fear or care again, for with such a shepherd how could we ever want any good thing?

Egyptian Spends His Time Sailing Across Mediterranean

Making his tenth trip across the Mediterranean Sea, Abdel Rahman Fadl is a man without a country. Born in Egypt, he wandered round Europe, including Russia. Three months ago, in Athens, he got the desire to go back to Egypt. But on his arrival at Alexandria he was refused admission; and on returning he found that Greece would not have him back. So he has spent the time since sailing across the Mediterranean, because there is nowhere he can land.—Montreal Star.

A number of friends pleasantly surprised Mrs. Webster Monday evening on the occasion of her 20th wedding anniversary and presented her with a silver cake basket. Three tables played bridge, and refreshments served at the close of play concluded a very enjoyable evening.

Golf and tennis enthusiasts are still enjoying a game at their favorite pastime. Tennis players were seen on the local courts on Sunday and it is reported several golf addicts in the Pass are frequenting the Blairmore golf course.

J. V. McDougall of Blairmore was appointed to the executive of the Alberta Amateur Hockey Association. H. C. McBurney of Coleman attended the meeting of the association recently held in Edmonton, and though he was nominated he proposed the name of Mr. McDougall, withdrawing in his favor. L. L. Morgan of Blairmore formerly represented this district.

Boys with air guns using street lights as targets are cautioned by the police that further damage will be followed by making them pay for the damage. Parents whose boys own these guns are advised by the police to caution the boys against the careless and mischievous use of these guns, for in addition to damage to property, there is also the risk of serious injury being caused to persons or themselves from carelessly aimed shots.

Due to the small turn-out of members at the curling meeting last week it was decided to postpone the meeting and call another for next Sunday. It is imperative that members show more interest and enthusiasm and attend so that a definite program may be mapped out and an understanding come to with the rink committee and lessees for renting the rink for the coming season.
